The Chinese question has been laid in the United States, we presume, by the recent Exclusion Act, but the spirit of hostility to the Chinese evidently remains, judging by the following, taken from the Alta California, the most staid of all the San Francisco papers :- "The Canadians are getting very unhappy over the presence of the Chinese who have been imported to build their railway, or to act as 'navvies,' British parlence. CONVENTION. Sir T. Wade to Earl Granville .- (Received August 3.) TIENTEIN, June 3, 1832. My Lord,-In the preceding despatch ketched the slow progress of the discussion, commenced in September 1876, of the question of mium taxation.

Briefly to restate the case which demands a legision at the bands of Her Majesty's Government, in 1876 I proposed at Chefoo that, the likin Collectorates being excluded from the port attlements, within which the Chinese Government was undoubtedly free to lovy li-kin on opiam. the li-kin which must otherwise belost to the uses by this exclusion of Collectorates should secured to them by retention of the opium bond until it was wanted for sale. The foreign Customs Inspectorate was then to collect the vone of the establishment of a uniform rate. The average of li-kin per pivul laid upon opium at the time I had reason to believe was little more than 30 tacls. The Grand Secretary Li proposed, as the uniform rate, a li-kin of 90 taels. at the port, be it remembered; that is to say, independently of any further taxation that the opium might become liable to in the interior. this I objected, and His Excellency reduced the rate gradually from 90 tasks to 60 tasks. Bu this still appearing to me excessive. This recommendation alarmed the Government of India, as exposing opium to a weight of taxation which might seriously interfere with Indian revenue. "It is still my impression that, had my arrangement been allowed to take effect, even for a term of probation, the fears of the Indian Government would have proved unfounded. But I could not say the same at this moment were the Governmeet of India to decide upon adopting the provision of the Chefoo Agreement just as it stands. The alarm has been sounded, and some leading statesmon in China would not improbably attempt the taxation of foreign opium at rates that might endanger the life of the golden goose. When the Agreement was negotiated, I thought myself entitled to rely on the discrimination I most, if not all, of the open ports. The li-kin was excessive at only two ports. At some but a t. The personal reflections on myself, however, contained in the Memorial are after all, but of secondary importance. August 1st, 1881 Tao Tsung Tang presents his compliments. The Grand Secretary received on the 24th ultimo Sir T. Wade's letter referring to a Memorial on the subject of stringent restrictions stated, to the effect that the charge on opium should be fixed at 80 tasls per chest, or that any thing fat he said in the course of the conferhim to the charge of vacillation. Sir Thomas Memorial in the Shan-pao was of no advantage.

the national revenue. The Grand Secretary is given to understand that the Shanghai Shen-pao prints and publishes at once any news it obtains, and that there has never been any supervision or restriction placed

The Memorial in question by the Grand Secretary on the subject of stringent restrictions on opium and advocating an increase of the li-kin and customs duty upon it was circulated by His Majesty's orders among all the provincial Customs authorities. There is no means of dispovering from what quarter the Shon-pas office obtained a copy, and as the Memorial was not scoret there is no occasion to make inquiries for the purpose or to suppress its issue.

In view of the length of time that opium has banefully flooded this country, the Grand Secrehim at the Yamon that as a preliminary measure the duties and li-kin upon it should be increased, in the expectation that on its price becoming dearer, opium-smokers would in some measure abstain from it on account of expense. gradually be obtained

Sir T. Wade considered that on account of the large evasion of duties in the interior, it would be far better to increase the customs duty and do away with the it kin. The Grand Brorotary pasented to this view, and proposed to follow the rule adopted by foreign condities of levying duties on exports in propor-Great Britain of placing a double duty on luxuries for the table, and levy the exceedingly light import daty of 150 tasks wer obest. The Grand Secretary Li was in Peking at the time on business, and came with the writer to

Sir T. Wade maintained that to raise the duty to 150 tasks was unreasonable, and declared that he could not give his consent to the proposal. At the same time, he broached the idea of raising the duty without doing away with the li-kin, and at first consented to the addition of 5 tasks per chest, then to 10 taels, and after a long discussion, to 15 taols as the maximum. The Grand Secretary found it hard to reconcile himself to this proposal. Sir T. Wade then said that any conditions of the proposed new treaty, and it impose on opium after it had left the port was a matter that did not o nears him at all. Thus. his first proposition was to deal with the two duties together, and his later proposition was to ! deal with them separately. As both Sir T. Wade and the Grand Secretary had business that required their attention, neither was able to-bring the other over to his views ... On subsequent occasions, when Li Chung-tang and the Ministers of the Board of Foreign Affairs received Sir T. Wade, the writer was not present, but he heard that Sir T. Wade reverted to his first proposition of increasing the duty and doing away with li-kin, and, with regard to the increase in duty, consented to a maximum charge of only 80 tacks per chest, and said that. to confirm the imposition of this charge, he would have to wait for a reply from the British Government and the Indian merchants. The Grand Secretary was aware that Sir I Wade, from his position in Peking, at a great is on duty, awaits His Majesty's summons, and Your servant having been honoured by the when business has to be tracenoted is expected

Further, the increase of the duty and li-kin or opium is the most important point of the present question. Now, Sir T. Wade first was in favour of increased duty and no li-kin, then proposed to pending danger, because for some years (when leal with the duty and to leave li-kin alone and afterwards proposed to raised the duty and not to do away with Mkin. With regard to the amount by which the duty was to be raised. Sir I. Wade, in the hearing of the Grand Secretary himself, assented to 5, 10, and 15 tasts, and afterwards, while discussing with Li Chung-tang and the Ministers of the Board of Foreign Affairs, an increased duty and no li-kin, mentioned 80 taols. This was only verbally, it is true, and there is no complete proof of the fact, but from first to last the discussions have been vague and without s fixed policy; how, then, could the Grand Secretary have approached His Majesty with this

H. R. H. Cambajah Pahtah Maha Secret Packwallah Soodam, Rajah Governor of the Province of Thebaw, in Burmah proper, sought au asylum in Siam from the complications of Brition to their value, and the rule adopted by tish and Burmese politics a few weeks since-H. R. H., who is a cousin of the late King and uncle of the present one (his sister being king (Pheebaw's mother) left Mandalay some 8 months since, in consequence of a misunderstanding with his royal nephew relative to the assassination of the entire royal family. The Rajah sought rediscuss the question at the Tsung-li Yamen with fugo in Rangoon at first, but as his presence in British territory interfered with the Treaty then in process of arrangement with Burmah, he left Rangoon and proceeded to Moulmain, and thence by elephants across country to Comburee in Siam, pausing on the way to pay his devotions at some noted Buddhist shrines. Altogether his land travel occupied some four months. It is understood that King Thebaw made his rendition one of the additional duty that China might see fit to was considered better that the authorities of British Burman might be able to reply to the Burmese Government that it was not in their power to deliver him up, than to attempt to explain, to an unlettered savage like Thebaw, the principles and sacred character of political retuge extended by Great Britain. By last accounts, the efforts to conclude a Treaty with Burmah having completely fallen through, and matters between Great British and King Thebaw ssauming a more menaging appearance, the Rajah returns to British Burmah, via Singapore, to await whatever may turn up.

I wrote you previously of a petition about to be presented by the subjects of Great British. to H.B.M's. representative in Siam, relative to the insecurity of life and property in this Kingdom: I should have said, the native subjects, Kaks, Klings, Indians and Chinese. The petition was duly presented, and by H.B.M's. Agent laid before the Siamese Government. The reply was purely Oriental, and is a fair specimen of the reasoning and statesmanship of Slam, During twenty years, argues the Foreign Minister, the records of the Kingdom show that but one British subject has been robbed and murdered by Siamess - whilst during the same period two Siamese have been attacked by British subjects. Ergo, what have British subjects to fear? It is rather the Siamese that should ask for guarantee. This style of argument is so profound, that, to plain, practical minds, it is scarcely comprehensible. By parity of reasoning, no preparations should be made to guard against an imnone threatened), only one suffered from the same cause. It would be equally folly on the part of a shipmaster to shorten sail when a heavy squall is rising fast, because, for sooth, for twenty years but one vessel has been dismasted in that place by the setion of the wind. I must, however, give Krom Mun-Putaret, the Police Magistrate, the credit of having arrested nearly the entire body of thieves who raided the floating house referred to previously, and of having reclaimed a large portion of the booty. But prevention is better than cure; and the wealthy Mahomedans and Chinese would fool safer in their houses of a night, if they knew there was an efficient body of Police, on whose protection they might rely in case of a similar attack on their dwellings.

The Portuguese community in Sium celebrat ed the anniversary of their King's birth by a grand dinner at the Oriental Hotel, last evening... All the principal members of the community were present, and the affair passed off with much colat. The Band of the Vesatri was in attendonce, and the music performed, or discoursed (if you like that better), under the directions of M. Fusco, the talented leader, was exceedingly good. Owing to the unfortunate quarrel between the Consul and the community, in regard to the imprisonment of a foreign office attaché, it is said without sufficient reason, neither Mr. Prostes

C. mund on August 25, sends to the Field a Martha Davis wivid account of his adventures with a bison when out shooting in the woods of the Maharajah of Mysore. He says:-"I had ocal shikaris, named Kampa, and another man to carry my spare rifle. My battery consisted of a D. B. S. bore rifle and a D. B. Raven 12-bore rifle. I took the 8-bore myself, and, Satsuma giving Kampa my 12-bore, crawled up to the herd through the grass. Out of some through the sumptuous ross window, falls worthy, and hallowed to many a pilgrim as bigh grass just in front of me rose a St. Ideno aplendid old bull. The smoke Young Siam was nearly up to my neck-and I could not Kolea see to give him the second barrel. I ran forward, but could see nothing; so, still Smiling Morn running, I opened the breech of the rifle, Trait d'Union threw out the empty cartridge, and was in the act of pushing a fresh cartridge home. when, from behind a small, thick clump of Alex Newton bamboos, some five yards from me, and about thirty yards from where I had started, I Cingales heard a loud snort. Kamps gasped out, H. Bremer 'Karti!' (bison) and vanished; and at once Hilds Maria the bull came charging down at me. I only Jane had time as he harled himself at me, to Magenta spring behind a small tree on my left. He Nicoline whizzed past like a batteriu-gram, cutting a large slab of bark out with one of his borns. and, turning almost in his own length, was round at me again. This occurred four or five times, but my attention was so fully taken up in dodging him that I could not Mozart get the rifle ready for use. To make a long story short, it ended in my catching my foot in a creeper. I fell over backwards, and as Antwerp rose he tossed me. One horn-I suppose
